

LEHRMAN CAMERON STUDIO

all photos on this page © 2008 Michael Cole

August Wilson Way Interpretive Planning and Design

Client
Seattle Center

Location
Seattle Center
Seattle, WA

Size
12' high portal
four-block long street

The August Wilson Way Portal, installed behind the Repertory Theater on the Seattle Center campus, is the first piece of what will eventually be a four-block, pedestrian passage with the ruins of a slave ship, steel street lights (one for every decade play), bronze art plaques, and carved granite theater seats. The Concept Plan for the Way and Portal sculpture was designed by Mindy. Serendipitously, the ceremony renaming "Republican Street" in honor of the brilliant African American playwright (Wilson) occurred three days after Obama's presidential election.

